sence treaty is signed, and that the subject of war and preparation for t can be safely forgotten because the futility of militarism will have been demonstrated. To argue with the masses of the people that when the present war is over, preparation must be begun for another war is viewed here as particularly unwise.

To decide the question of after-the-war military training before the outcome of the war is determined is regarded as unnecessary and super fuous. There will be ample time to frame a military policy after the peace treaty is signed, for no one in the Government here seriously be-lieves any of the powerful nations of the globe will be ready for another war for many years after the present conflict has been ended. As for the alleged menace of Japan, which the advocates of military training are constantly preaching, the expec-iation here is that Japan will join the league of nations and abide by relations with the United States, es the Lansing-ishil agreement indicates. To urge universal military training only as a preparation against possible trouble with Japan is considered by opponents of such legislation, particularly members of the House committee, with whom I have discussed the matter, as very dangerous to good relations. America is fighting to make the world safe for democracy, which means safety from every military memace, so that large standing armies will be demobilized and the enforced training of the nation's youth to think in military terms tion's youth to think in military terms shall no longer be necessary.

Whether or not Godsol suspected that he was being shadowed is not known, but if so he did not allow the fact to interfere with his pleasure at the Florida resort. He quit a $20 a day suite in the Hotel Vanderbilt, in New York to go to the Hotel Royal Poinciana, at Paim Beach. There he laughed while he whiled away thousands of dollars on the roulette table and entertained magnificently.

He is said to have lost $10,000 in a single night at roulette.

Godsol was engaged in the general getting is sometimes very wide. In the first place, the Utilities Commission will not be disposed to listen to applications for straight 5-cent fares until the traction companies have given a trial to operations under increased wages to the car men. That is, the companies will have to demonstrate by actual figures that they are unable to operate without serious loss before they can obtain a solid foundation to go before the commission.

The second obstacle to anything like an early raising of car fares in Washington is that the Utilities Commission has never completed the valuations of the two street railway companies, although it expects soon

Commission will not sanction large dividends while the war continues. It has determined that, in connection with rate hearings already held and in anticipation of those to come. The corporations will have to make fi-nancial sacrifices during the war the same as the public.

The position taken by the commission in the "Pepco" case was that a public utility should be allowed rates sufficient to earn about 8 per cent on its valuation. The war was on when this decision was rendered, but it is known that the commission now does not feel that so large a re-turn should be permitted. Its forth-coming decisions will reveal its posi-tion that the public and the corporations must each bear part of the war burden, with the corporations com-pelled to pars with prospects of the fat dividends of former years.
